Council delays decision on alcohol ordinance

by Lindy Magner

Due to concern over whether local establishments which sell alcohol had been notified of the council's Tuesday night consideration of an ordinance which would place restrictions on alcohol vendors, members voted unanimously to approve the ordinance in concept only, therefore keeping the door open for additional public comment.

"If something is worth doing, it's worth doing right," said Mayor Brian Cochran as he expressed concerns about adopting an ordinance when those effected by regulations had not been notified of the meeting.

"We'll be buying ourselves a bunch of problems if we don't include the owners in the process," he said.

The ordinance would restrict new, on-site alcohol vendors such as bars from locating within 1,000 feet of an existing bar, as well as 500 feet from a vendor such as a convenience store, which is selling alcohol for off-site consumption.

And, the ordinance would restrict those new vendors from locating within 500 feet of schools, churches, parks, health facilities and residential zones.

Also, in granting a permit to a new business, the ordinance would require the Planning Commission and City Council to factor in whether the proposed business would be in a high-crime area, as defined by the Sheriff's Department.

The ordinance was first drafted last November, and came before the Planning Commission four times for public comment. It received final Planning Commission approval March 22.

Community Development Director Jim Butler explained that the ordinance was drafted in response to "current and prospective problems resulting from the lack of control of the sale of alcoholic beverages" within the city.

He noted that the ordinance would require over half of the city's 46 existing alcohol-sale businesses to secure conditional use permits.

"About eight of the newer businesses already have CUPs and are in compliance with the ordinance," he said.

Compliance with the ordinance would be required prior to Jan. 1, 1995.

Butler noted that if council so directed, the $250 permit fee could be waived for the alcohol-sale businesses as they begin to comply with the ordinance, with only a nominal fee charged for processing.

During the public hearing, several residents and community leaders lauded the ordinance, while bar owners pleaded for postponement of the ordinance's consideration.

Linda Reynolds, a Lemon Grove School District board member, stated that though she was not speaking on behalf of the board, she felt the ordinance would aid the district in its attempt to curb underage drinking.

"This ordinance would help control the sale of alcohol to minors and limit where (alcohol) establishments could be located in regard to schools. It would also send a strong message that we care about our community."

Rev. Joan Pettis, one of about five local pastors who spoke, stated that though she was not "anti-alcohol," she was "very grateful" for the proposed ordinance.

"I'm concerned about the number of kids I personally know who can find alcohol in the community," she said.

Bar owner Garth Watkins led the call for postponing a vote on the ordinance, stating that he found out "by accident" that council was considering the ordinance this evening.

"I and at least several other owners were not notified of tonight's meeting. I don't think this is a legal hearing without notification."

Bar owners of the Pelikan Pub and Fitz and Alice's, who were told of the meeting by Watkins, echoed his concerns.

Rev. Ken Gosselin pastor of the Lemon Grove United Methodist Church, said that though he favored the ordinance, he did not want to see it pass in a less than fair manner.

"My daughter is a recovering alcoholic, and I know availability had something to do with that. However, we shouldn't pass this in a railroad sort of way."

When asked by Cochran if the owners of alcohol sale establishments had been notified of the council meeting, Butler replied that he "was not sure" of notification of this meeting, though owners had been notified of the Planning Commission's February meeting.

He stated that many of the concerns expressed at Planning Commission meetings had been

Mr. Lem N. Grove is back

The new and improved Mr. Lem N. Grove, who will hopefully hold up better under adverse weather conditions than his predecessor, is back as the Old Time Days mascot.

According to Nancy McCadam of the Old Times Days Association, the original costume, constructed of paper maché and chicken wire, was destroyed by water (via a leaky roof where it was stored) about 12 years ago.

Several months ago, the association decided it would reconstruct the leggy Mr. Lem N., and put out a call for photos of the former gentleman. Those photos were used by a costume-maker in creating a "materialistic" Mr. Lem N. Grove; cost to the association was about $500, said McCadam.

As well as marching in the parade, he will be present at other Old Time Days activities; several volunteers will alternate as the mascot.

Historic house in path of state Route 125

by Lindy Magner

It seems that a historic Troy Street home built in the late 1920s sits in the path of the state Route 125 extension planned for construction in several years.

And, Caltrans will need the city's help in overseeing a future relocation and sale of the house which is eligible for inclusion in the National Register for Historic Places.

At Tuesday night's meeting, the City Council approved a resolution which would put the city in an oversight position regarding the relocation and sale of the house which is now occupied by owner George Cremer.

According to Richard Hatch of Caltrans, his agency is prohibited from demolishing structures older than 50 years, and must enter into agreements with local jurisdictions as to the future of the historic structures.

"Normally, when we buy properties for right-of-way, we buy for destruction. This house, due to its age, will need to be displaced," he said, noting that Caltrans is allowed to demolish the structure as a last resort, after recording its dimensions and characteristics.

Chris White, Caltrans environmental branch chief, stated that entering into an agreement with the city as well as with the Federal Highway Administration regarding historic homes is required before Caltrans can receive its environmental clearance.

"We want to save this house," Hatch said, noting that an architectural survey recently conducted by a consultant concluded that the "Tudor revival style" home "represents the style of a master," as designed by San Diego architect Frederic C. Clemshaw and constructed by George Simpson.

Hatch added that the home, called the H. Lee House, was built for auto businessman Harold or Howard Lee, and was typical of "countryside residences" which existed at that time.

In the 1960s, a wing was added to the house by its current owner, said Hatch, noting that negotiations with the owner will occur after the highway project receives its environmental clearance.

Clemer stated that though he has "always loved the house," he doubts he would want to continue as its owner after a relocation.

"I really don't think the house can be moved; it's a large house, and not in the best shape due probably to earthquakes," he said. "And, it's too big for me now."

He is the third owner of the hilltop house, purchasing it in 1951.

B-Words Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

Old Time Days

Welcome back, Mr. LEM N. GROVE ... Kudos to Nancy McCadam and her staff for the rejuvenation of our town mascot. The new Lem N. Grove is a smashing success and should be a focal point in our upcoming Old Time Days Parade. Also, I would hope that he could well represent us in other parades as well.

To go back away and wax a bit nostalgic, I can remember when he was smaller, less rotund, and pretty shopworn. His first appearance, I recall, was with a group called the "LEMON-ETTES." They were a gaggle of males who were dressed in identical tutus and did a line-dance routine along the parade route, handing out lemon drops to the kids along the way. This practice is now frowned upon for safety reasons which is understandable, but the fun is gone. Some of the prominent men in town were members of the group including our former mayor, Jim Dorman. Also there was Sam Pernicano, Bob Russell, Charley Montgomery, and other faces that I can't put names to today. They represented us in other affairs, and always to a hilarious degree.

The Lem N. Grove "costume" was a tight fitting, hot bubble that one wiggled into. I confess to spending at least one afternoon in the thing, but that was about 20 years and 20 pounds ago. It was usually worn by one of Karen Thomson's boys, or youths of similar girth and age. I do not know whatever happened to the outfit, but that is of no matter now that the new Mr. Lem N. Grove has arrived on the scene.

Thanks again, Nancy and crew for bringing back an old Lemon Grove native to the place of his birth.

Also, I am compelled to mention that on this coming Saturday, the Kiwanis Club of Lemon Grove will once again put on the annual Pancake Breakfast at the Lemon Grove Middle School on School Lane. This traditional event began about 25 years ago, and was the forerunner of the pancake breakfast-type of fund raiser that is so popular today. I believe that it was Dr. Bob Swenson, a local dentist, who came up with the idea of us all rallying around the grill to serve up pancakes for the public for a nominal fee. They are cheap to make and delicious when flipped by the old masters such as Dr. Si Brumbaugh, Dr. Thayer Crow, Sam Solleder, Ray Treinen, Vern Marston, and of course yours truly, who taught them all. Byron Netzley always tried hard but just didn't have the knack no matter how much I tried to teach him. The new crew, Bob Adams, Dr. Bob Knauer, Dale Chamberlain and Lloyd Leibold are doing a fine job, under the old master's tutelage. Be sure to partake of the Pancake Breakfast before the Parade on Saturday, May 8, from 7 to 11 a.m.

My personal specialty is an "engineered" stack of cakes that can be had by special request. It simply consists of a stack with the top cake having a hole in the center which holds the butter and syrup while it seeps evenly down through the succulent pile of culinary delight. Hope to see you all there!

addressed in the subsequent drafts of the ordinance.

City Attorney Don McLean explained that legally, the city had abided by the public notice required by the state.

"State law requires a published notice (of public hearings), and that was given in the Lemon Grove Review. The state statutes do not deal with what a city council would think is proper or fair notice. If council wants to adopt a policy, as other cities have, in which notices are mailed to people effected, than it can do that," he said.

He then stated that an option for the council would be to consider tonight's meeting a "first reading" of the ordinance, and bring back the item at the next council meeting for a second reading and final adoption, during which public comment would be taken.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

On this and that, or, how we write a column when there's no major subject to get steamed up about!

The media is full these days of presidential "first 100 days" analyses. The president says he's done pretty well (he would, of course); the Republicans say his administration is a total failure and the "big gun" columnists are falling all over each other trying to be omniscient. Most seem to be measuring Clinton's first "first 100" on a Franklin Roosevelt yardstick. Give the man a break! For heavens sake, it takes more than 100 days to gestate a baby. It ought to take at least that long to gestate a major change in government.

I see Ross Perot is still yapping around the fringe like a dyspeptic Pekinese. I'm still not sure why anyone pays much attention to him.

From what we've seen of Congress for the last 100 days, even a president of their own party can't unify the Democrats. Can you imagine an outsider like Perot trying to tell Congress, "I know better than you." I guess his best chance would be to run as a Republican in 1996, that is, if he can step over the prostrate body of Bob Dole!

There were several items of interest in last Sunday's newspaper. After a good deal of recent indignation over the role of the county's Child Protective Services in "breaking up the American family," we suddenly find critics complaining that children are being hurt by being returned to damaging and dysfunctional homes.

Having worked "in the field," I know that the decision-making involving where to place a child is difficult and soul-searching. I firmly believe that the grand jury, last year, attacked Child Protective Service far beyond what the evidence indicated. They got lots of support from the conservative side, many of whom seem to see any home as better than out-of-home placement. The current call for middle ground is long overdue.

The events in Jamestown, California are certainly worthy of note. There, if you recall, a lady named Ellie Nesler, pumped five bullets into the head of the man on trial for molesting her child, and she did it as he waited handcuffed in the courthouse. This kind of thing always creates a dilemma for those of us who believe in the law. We know from experience that, too often, these offenders get off lightly and are back plying their trade all too soon. On the other hand, we worry a lot about vigilante justice and its long-range ramifications.

Not so, apparently, for the citizens of Jamestown, an old gold rush mining town. They're all for Ellis, raising money with T-shirts, bumper stickers ("Let's dig him up and shoot him again") and bake sales. Not only are Jamestownians on the support team, but also folks from all over the country have rushed to her defense, as well as a raft of eager lawyers anxious to make a national reputation. I wonder, am I the only one who has some misgivings about this?

Finally, the "chutzpah" award of the week goes to the Jenny Craig people who placed a half-page ad in Sunday's Union-Tribune (and I imagine every other daily in the country) inviting Nutri-System users to join them, now that the latter is in apparent financial stress. The ad is quite unctuous and concerned about Nutri-system users not losing their investment. I know the diet business is, pardon the expression, "dog eat dog," but as I read it, all I could visualize was buzzards circling overhead waiting for the still-warm body to turn cold.

Although buzzards and such doings are the imitable laws of nature and business, I sure would hate to see the undertaker already measuring me while I was still alive to see it.

After reading the ad, I was kind of glad that the Craig's horse came in last in the Kentucky Derby.

From Where I Sit

Stuck in San Diego

by Frank Andrews

Twice we sold out in San Diego and moved away, but twice we moved back - never to move again. When my wife's relatives resettled in Colorado from Oklahoma, she wanted to be closer to them. We sold our new home in La Mesa and also tried the mountain climate for a short couple of years.

Our paperhanging business was so busy that we had to work nights and weekends to keep up with the demand. We were hanging only the most difficult jobs - never an easy one. The easy papers were being hung by the "lady of the house" or the other paperhangers in the area. The San Diego area was growing and the crowded conditions that exist in L.A. were slowly creeping upon us.

We now had some good reasons to move, so we did. We purchased 11 beautiful acres in the little town of Mancos in southwestern Colorado, right near the Mesa Verde National Park. The nice folks, Vern and Fern, not only sold us the land but ran city water to our lot line and gave us shares in the ditch water for irrigation. There were two ponds on the property that were stocked with fish.

First thing, we purchased a Traveleze house trailer and pulled it up there for temporary shelter while we built our new mountain home. From then on, we lugged building materials up there every trip we made. Materials were a lot cheaper in San Diego than in Mancos. Unfortunately, most all of our trips for saving money were more trouble and expense than we planned.

I bought a full bundle of 2x4 studs (over 200) at the old Handyman in La Mesa for only 22 cents apiece. The load just fit tightly in our two-wheel trailer so to unload the bundle intact was not easy. The 2x4s were left out in the snow and rain for the winter. When I busted the metal bindings open for the start of our construction, the boards twisted and turned from the heat of the hot, spring sun. Not one of those many 2x4s could be used and ended up in the fireplace.

On another winter trip pulling an overloaded trailer during a blizzard that made it nearly impossible to see the road, I hit a big cow head-on. We ended up in the ditch and the poor critter was on her side in the middle of the road and could not get up. I woke a nearby farmer, a bishop from the local Mormon Church, and he flipped that poor, pregnant animal upright with very little effort. The mother cow found a safe place from the storm and had her cute little calf, who was later named Frankie.

Later, after many gruesome trips, I learned that so many building materials could be bought cheaper right near Mancos without the hassle of hauling. There was a plywood mill close by where we purchased exterior grade plywood for $2 per sheet. They were irregulars but I used plywood for roof, floor, exterior siding, and much, much more.

Our original plans were to build a barn on the back of the lot and then we could have a place for our materials out of the weather. We were so anxious to move up to Colorado that we decided to make the barn into a house and move into it. It ended up a pretty neat house.

The whole upper floor (the hay loft) was our huge bedroom, dressing room and bathroom, with mucho storage space on both sides. The first floor (animal stalls) became a living room, dining room, kitchen, and half bath. It all turned out so nice that we never did build the big house that we planned on the center of the lot with fantastic views of the snowcapped mountains.

After two years of the Colorado climate, we sold our mountain retreat and moved back to the San Diego area, "the best climate in the world."

Christian Community Theater summer season on Mt. Helix includes 'Oklahoma'

Christian Community Theater (CCT) announces its lineup of musical theater productions with an expanded season of four shows.

Beginning the summer season, CCT will present Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The King and I", opening June 24 at Kit Carson Amphitheater in Escondido.

The popular tradition of productions under the stars at the beautiful Mt. Helix Amphitheater in La Mesa continues this summer with "Oklahoma!", opening July 22, and "Anything Goes," opening Aug. 19. CCT's 1993 season is extending into the fall with "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" opening Oct. 14 at Theatre East in El Cajon.

Season tickets for CCT's entire 1993 season, are now available; individual tickets go on sale May 14. Adult ticket prices range from $12 to $18, discounts are available for seniors or groups over 15, and children are admitted at half-price.

As the largest community theater in the San Diego area, CCT's program involves hundreds of people and thousands of volunteer hours throughout the year. East County area residents are encouraged to get involved. The many areas of need include publicity, parking, ushering, box office, refreshments, set construction, sewing, props, sound, lighting and stage crew.

Christian Community Theater is a non-profit, educational organization which produces quality musical theater atop scenic Mt. Helix and at Theatre East in El Cajon. CCT's productions will reach audiences of more than 30,000 this year.

Governed by an executive board, CCT also supports Christian Youth Theater (CYT), a theater arts training program for children ages 6-18 with six locations in the San Diego area. For tickets and more information call 588-0206 or 1-800-696-1929.

Is your child missing the fun because he can't see well?

If your child spends more time on the sidelines than on the playing field, perhaps he has an undetected vision problem.

Or maybe he tries hard but doesn't succeed because he has poor depth perception or limited eye movement skills.

Your son (or daughter) may be among an estimated six million young persons in America whose enjoyment of athletics is limited because of visual deficiencies.

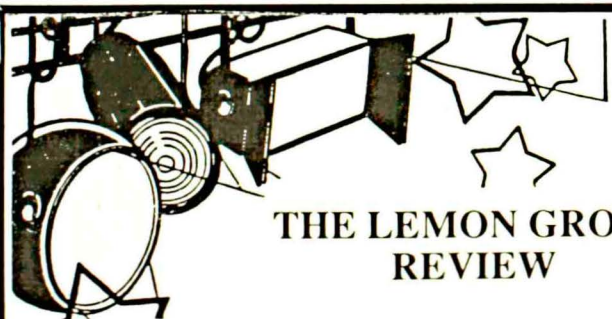

We specialize in children's vision and we are committed to working with young athletes. If you want to find out more about your child's visual abilities and ways to improve them, give us a call and schedule a complimentary sports vision screening and receive a free brochure about sports vision.

Fire Expo provides fun and education for all

by Paul Treske

There were fire engines from all over Southern California, most of them highly sophisticated pieces of machinery. But, as always, I saw them through the eyes of a child.

It was the Fire Expo at Grossmont Center last Saturday and it was a delight of fire department flash and dash. Sponsored by the San Diego County Fire Chiefs, the Expo had engines of all colors (mostly red) and descriptions. They came from San Diego, East County, Rancho Santa Fe, Del Mar, Auburn, Encinitas and a host of other cities including Lemon Grove.

Of course, there was serious intent behind the "three ring" extravaganza. One area taught children the "stop, drop and roll" concept of facing a fire in their own homes. Several old cars were demolished in demonstration of accident-victim removal. There were displays by the TIP (Trauma Intervention Programs) staff and a table where former La Mesa Mayor Fred Nagel, representing a program of the Office of Disaster Preparedness of San Diego County, gave out material on the location of earthquake faults and disaster preparation.

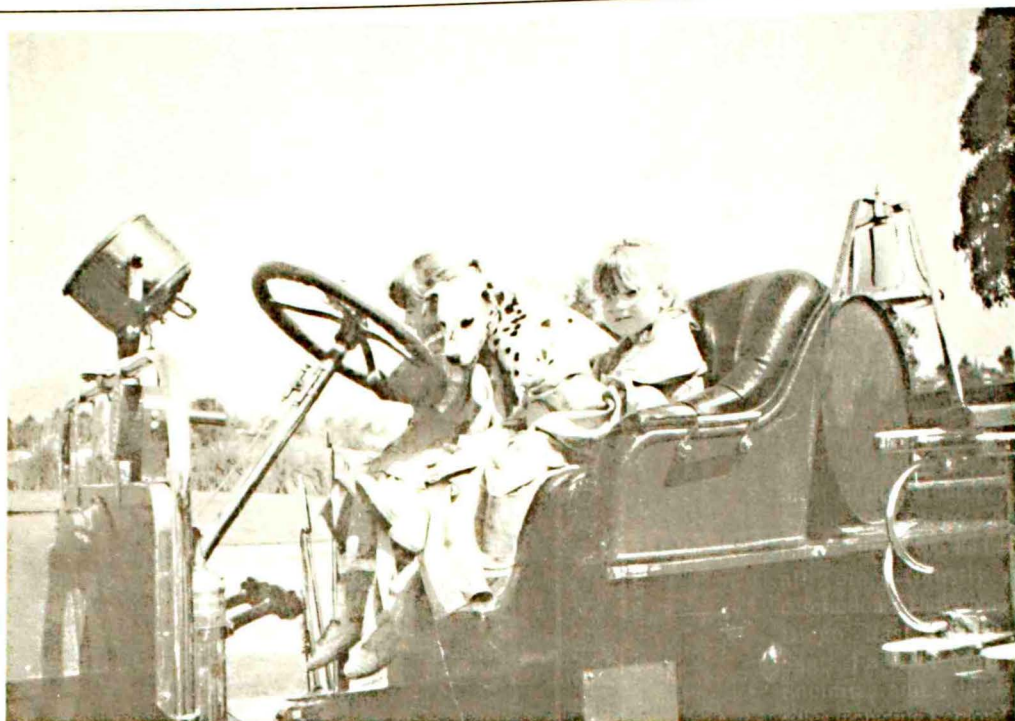

The Burn Institute was represented as was the DARE program, but it was the fun and excitement for families and children that proved the real magnet.

And fun there was! Firefighters rappelled down from ladders pushed high in the air. Children (and some adults as well) climbed about old-fashioned fire engines for rides around the shopping center grounds with bells and sirens sounding.

Chula Vista's vintage engine was available for children to perch in the driver's seat, complete with the traditional dalmatian. A mobile-robot fire plug, with moving eyes spoke to the children and followed them around mischievously.

For some of the older folks, it was a table filled with fire helmets, some new, some antique, from countries around the world, including England, France, Germany, Japan, India and the old USSR, that caught their attention.

Above all, everywhere there were firefighters, bending to speak to the awestruck children, to explain the things they saw and, sometimes, even to lift them onto that shiny, red engine where long-held fantasies could be realized and pleasant dreams relived.

The Fire Expo at Grossmont Center was a showplace for all the latest equipment. However these young visitors were caught in a picture reminiscent of a Norman Rockwell painting with the old fire engine and the traditional dalmation mascot.

JROTC students earn praise

Dear Editor:

Some good news for a change.

It seems we are inundated these days with bad news regarding our young people. Daily we see television newscasts or newspaper articles reporting gang activities, drive-by shootings, drug problems and the like. As adults and parents we may sometimes get the impression that everything is wrong with our younger generation. This is simply not the case.

On Saturday, April 24, the annual Southern California Invitational Drill Meet, sponsored by the Mt. Miguel JROTC Department and local veteran's organizations, was held at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot. Over 1,000 ROTC cadets representing 34 high schools from as far away as Guam, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, and Northern California, participated along with many local JROTC units. Active duty Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force personnel voluntarily gave up their Saturday to spend a very long day on the tarmac judging competing drill teams and color guards.

As usual, the level of performance of the teams varied from fair to sensational but there were no losers. Every youngster out there was doing his or her dead-level best. The pride they showed in themselves and their accomplishments was obvious to even the most casual observer.

Drill-team members spend many, many, long hours practicing in preparation for this meet. Along the way they learn the importance of advance preparation, teamwork, and self-discipline.

Major Jay Pry, ROTC instructor at Mt. Miguel, and Captain John Coffin, a former instructor, are the prime movers and organizers of the annual drill meet. Major Pry organized the first invitational some 12 years ago as a small affair held in the Mt. Miguel parking lot. Over the years the meet has grown to become the major drill event in Southern California.

Recognition is also due to the various veterans organizations which together contributed over $2,000 for trophies given out at the end of the day.

Also essential to the success of the event was the support and cooperation of authorities at both Marine Corps Recruit Depot and the Naval Training Center where out-of-town participants were housed and fed.

Last but not least, over 40 Mt. Miguel cadets took part as competitors and as workers carrying out the myriad tasks necessary to make an event of this magnitude run smoothly.

Incidentally, even though they were invited, there were no television cameras or news photographers in attendance. It seems a thousand teenagers engaged in a wholesome activity simply isn't news.

If there is a message for parents here it is this - do not despair, we have a lot of good kids doing a great many good things at Mt. Miguel and elsewhere around the country. It is just that most of these positive activities don't make the evening news.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF EVELYNE GRITZ

Case Number: 159662

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of: Evelyn Gritz. A PETITION has been filed by Dolores J. Pion and Molly M. Westberg in the Superior Court of California, County of San Diego.

THE PETITION requests that Dolores J. Pion and Molly M. Westberg be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on May 17, 1993 at 1:45 p.m. in Dept. F-5, located at: 1501-1555 Sixth Ave., San Diego, CA 92101

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
